

GRANDMA GOES TO ANTARCTICA: A Journey of Discovery (2012)

This is the true story of a 57-year-old grandmother who was stationed in Antarctica for five months as a contract worker for the National Science Foundation (NSF).

GRANDMA GOES TO THE SOUTH PACIFIC: A Voyage of Appreciation (2013)

The grandmother who worked in Antarctica reminisces about the time she spent in French Polynesia living on a remote, private island (population of four).

GRANDMA GOES TO THE ALASKAN WILDERNESS: An Excursion of Extremes (2013)

The grandmother who worked in Antarctica and roughed it on a small, remote island in the South Pacific learns necessary back-to-nature survival skills in America's final frontier.

THE JR. IDITAROD: Alaska's Little-Known Sled Dog Race – Coverage of the 2013 Competition (2013)

Almost everyone has heard of the Iditarod, Alaska's grueling sled dog endurance race, but only a few are aware of the Jr. Iditarod, the first long-distance race for juvenile mushers (ages 14-17). This book reveals the story behind this race.
